Ray S. Cline is a senior associate at CSIS and formerly served as deputy director for intelligence at the CIA and director of the Bureau of Intelligence and Research at the State Department. His latest book, The CIA: Reality Versus Myth (Washington: Acropolis Books, 1982), contains an earlier version of this reminiscence.

National euphoria over the successful conclusion of the Cuban missile crisis, argues a former key CIA analyst, at the time may have contributed to decreasing U.S. concern for intelligence assessment in subsequent years.

A CIA Reminiscence

The CIA's deputy director for intelligence (DDI) supervises the sorting and study of the flood of information reaching this country from all sources, sifting the wheat from the chaff, the signals from the noise. He is the highest-ranking full-time intelligence analyst in Washington. He is responsible for keeping meaningful intelligence flowing to the whole national security community and for letting his boss, the Director of Central Intelligence (DCI), and the DCI's boss, the president, know what is going on in the turbulent world of foreign geopolitics and actual or potential threats of military action.

Among the most crucial are the 1,000 men and women working in the National Photographic Intelligence Center (NPIC), where in 1962 high-flying U-2 and satellite reconnaissance photography received its initial readout after each flight.

In 1962, I served as DDI under John A. McCone, and on a normal day at my desk on the seventh floor in the Langley headquarters building, hundreds of pieces of information were called to my attention in one way or another to make sure I perceived the strategic implications and tried to communicate them to the director, Secretary of State Dean Rusk, Secretary of Defense Robert McNamara, Assistant to the President for National Security Affairs McGeorge Bundy, and President John F. Kennedy.

Late in the afternoon of October 15, 1962, my secure (scrambled) phone rang and a senior officer at NPIC cast all the many other thoughts and preoccupations of the DDI out

WASHINGTON 25, D. C.

9 March 1962

Dear :

Hold for White House announcement at 11 A.M. today
(9 March 1962).

This is a personal advance to you. General Carter left Washington yesterday and is back at Fort Bliss, Texas.

I am also enclosing for release at 11 A.M. today the announcement that Frank G. Wisner, one-time Deputy Director for Plans, CIA, is returning to the Agency as Special Assistant to the Director. He will be in the Washington
Headquarters at Langley, Virginia.

I have no picture of Carter but Defense should have some.

MAR 9 1962

The White House today announced the President had selected Major General Marshall Sylvester Carter, United States Army, to be the Deputy Director of Central Intelligence vice General Charles P. Cabell, USAF, resigned.

General Carter will be the principal executive officer of the Central Intelligence Agency and in the absence of the Director, John A. McCone, will be the Acting Director. Mr. McCone recommended to the President the appointment of General Carter.

Under the directive issued by the President on 16 January 1962, Mr. McCone, as principal intelligence officer to the President, will give effective guidance to the entire intelligence community and will preside as Chairman of the United States Intelligence Board. Under this same directive the DDCI will be the CIA representative on the Board and will act as the Agency's chief executive officer operating under the policy guidance of the Director. Under this plan, the Deputy Director will assume greater responsibilities.

General Carter is an outstanding officer having served in high government posts which gave him intimate knowledge of the functions of intelligence in the U. S. Government.

General Carter is now the Commanding General, U. S. Army Air Defense Center and Commandant, U. S. Army Air Defense School, Fort Bliss, Texas. He has had considerable experience in international affairs, having served as a member of the United States Delegation to the following international conferences:

- Conference of Four Heads of State, Cairo, Egypt, 1943.
- Council of Foreign Ministers, Moscow, USSR, 1947.
- Inter-American Conference for Maintenance of Peace and Security, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 1947.

Second Session, General Assembly, United Nations, New York, 1947.
Ninth International Conference of American States, Bogota,
Columbia, 1948.

Third Session, General Session, United Nations, Paris, France, 1948.

General Carter served as Director of the Executive Office of the Secretary of Defense under Secretary George C. Marshall and also under Secretary Robert A. Lovett. He has had varied military service not only as a staff officer but with Coast Artillery units, with anti-aircraft artillery units, with infantry divisions, air defense commands. He was Executive Assistant to the Assistant to the Secretary of State, and in 1949 was named Deputy to the Ambassador for Military Assistance Programs for Europe with station at the American Embassy in London. He had the rank of Minister and concurrently was Deputy Chairman, European Correlation Committee.

General Carter was born at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, 16 September 1909, the son of Brigadier General and Mrs. C. C. Carter. He was married on 14 July 1934 to Preet Nichols. They have one son and two daughters. General Carter was graduated from the United States Military Academy in 1931 with a Bachelor of Science degree and in 1936 received a Master of Science degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. He also was graduated from the Battery Officers' Course, the Coast Artillery School, and in 1950 was graduated from the National War College.

From second lieutenant on 11 June 1931 General Carter became a temporary

Brigadier General on 8 April 1947 and a Major General on 21 December 1955 with date of rank from 1 July 1951.

General Carter has served in Panama, China, London, Alaska, Hawaii. His decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster; the Bronze Star Medal, and decorations from the Republic of China and the Netherlands. He is known to his colleagues as "Pat" Carter. His hobbies are hunting, fishing, camping, and ice hockey.

Regarding General Carter the late General George C. Marshall wrote:

"One of the top men of the Army. Officer of the highest integrity and dependability. Has broad knowledge of world affairs and figures."

Robert A. Lovett, former Secretary of Defense wrote of General Carter:

"General Carter is an officer of unusual ability. He is eminently qualified for high positions of trust and responsibility. He has performed brilliantly in an exceedingly difficult assignment involving unusually heavy responsibilities and severe pressure."

General E.E. Partridge, USAF, when Commanding NORAD, wrote:

"General Carter is the most outstanding senior officer who ever served with me. His ability to work with all services and foreign governments is exceptional."

General L.S. Kuter, now commanding NORAD wrote of General Carter who was Chief of Staff of NORAD:

"One of the most outstanding general officers known to me from any service. Chiefly through his sound, steady and persistent effort officers and men of the NORAD staff have been integrated into a group dedicated only to the accomplishment of the mission assigned NORAD without any prejudice in form of any one service or any one country." Lewis W. Douglas, when Ambassador to the Court of St. James', wrote of General Carter, then Special Assistant to the U.S. Ambassador in London:

"General Carter is completely dependable and industrious; his candor combined with tact, his almost complete selflessness and high sense of responsibility; his unimpeachable integrity, courteous firmness; his ability to quickly acquire knowledge of new duties; his adaptability and likeable personality, altogether, make General Carter a person of exceptional talents."

MAJOR GENERAL MARSHALL S. CARTER, USA

Marshall Sylvester Carter was born at Fortress Monroe, Virginia, September 16, 1903. He was graduated from the U.S. Military Academy in 1931 and commissioned a second lieutenant in the Coast Artillery Corps. Prior to World War II, he served with various Anti-Aircraft Artillery units in Hawaii, Panama, and the United States. In addition, he served as an instructor in the Department of Natural and Experimental Philosophy at the U.S. Military Academy.

In 1942, General Carter was assigned to the Logistics Group, Operations Division, War Department General Staff. From July 1945 to January 1946 he was Deputy and Assistant Chief of Staff, G-5, Headquarters, China Theater, with station in Chungking and Shanghai. He then became Assistant Executive to the Assistant Secretary of War in Washington where he served until April 1946.

At this time, General Carter was appointed Special Representative in Washington for General of the Army George C. Marshall, then in China. This position he held until named Special Assistant to the Secretary of State in January 1947. Two years later, General Carter became Deputy to the Ambassador for Military Assistance Programs for Europe with station at the American Embassy in London. Concurrently, he served as Deputy Chairman, European Correlation Committee. In these capacities, General Carter held the personal rank of Minister. In August 1949, he was assigned by the State Department as a student at the National War College, graduating in June 1950.

Following a short tour as Commander of the 138th Anti-Aircraft Group in Japan, General Carter was recalled to Washington by General Marshall, to become Director of the Executive Office of the Secretary of Defense. General Carter served in this capacity under General Marshall and his successor, Mr. Lovett, until November 1952 when he became Deputy Commanding General of the US Army in Alaska with station at Fort Richardson. Concurrently, in November 1954, when the 71st Infantry Division was activated in Alaska, he was appointed its Deputy Commanding General.

From June 1955 until June 1956, General Carter was Commanding General of the Fifth Region, Army Anti-Aircraft Command, with headquarters at Fort Sheridan, Illinois. For the next five months, he served as Deputy Commanding General of the Army Anti-Aircraft Command in Colorado Springs, Colorado, leaving this assignment to become Chief of Staff of the newly-formed Continental Air Defense Command at Ent Air Force Base, Colorado Springs, in October 1956. When this command was expanded into the North American Air Defense Command in September 1957, General Carter also became Chief of Staff of this unified command, the first command of this type in the United States.

General Carter assumed his present duties as Chief of Staff, Eighth US Army in December 1959. Upon completion of this assignment in January 1961, he will take command of the Army Air Defense Center and Air Defense School at Fort Bliss, Texas.

He has served as a member of the United States Delegation to the following international conferences:

Conference of Four Heads of State, Cairo, Egypt, 1943; Council of Foreign Ministers, Moscow, USSR, 1947; Inter-American Conference for Maintenance of Peace and Security, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil, 1947; Second Session of General Assembly of United Nations, New York, 1947; Ninth International Conference of American States, Bogota, Colombia, 1948; and the Third Session of General Assembly of United Nations, Paris, France, 1948.

From second lieutenant on 11 June 1931 General Carter became a temporary

Brigadier General on 8 April 1947 and a Major General on 21 December 1955 with date of rank from 1 July 1951.

General Carter has served in Panama, China, London, Alaska, Hawaii. His decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Legion of Merit with Oak Leaf Cluster, the Bronze Star Medal, and decorations from the Republic of China and the Netherlands. He is known to his colleagues as "Pat" Carter. His hobbies are hunting, fishing, camping, and ice hockey.

Regarding General Carter the late General George C. Marshall wrote:

"One of the top men of the Army. Officer of the highest integrity and dependability. Has broad knowledge of world affairs and figures."

Robert A. Lovett
Former Secretary of Defense/wrote of General Carter:

General E.E. Partridge, USAF, when Commanding NORAD, wrote:

"General Carter is the most outstanding senior officer who ever served with me. His ability to work with all services and foreign governments is exceptional."

General L.S. Kuter, now commanding NORAD wrote of General Carter who was Chief of Staff of NORAD:

"One of the most outstanding general officers known to me from any service. Chiefly through his sound, steady and persistent effort officers and men of the NORAD staff have been integrated into a group dedicated only to the accomplishment of the mission assigned NORAD without any prejudice in form of any one service or any one country."

Lewis W. Douglas, when Ambassador to the Court of St. James', wrote of General Carter, then Special Assistant to the U.S. Ambassador in London:

"General Carter is completely dependable and industrious; his candor combined with tact, his almost complete selflessness and high sense of responsibility; his unimpeachable integrity, courteous firmness; his ability to quickly acquire knowledge of new duties; his adaptability and likeable personality, altogether, make General Carter a person of exceptional talents."
